Section 1: Introduction

What is violence?

The Occupational Health and Safety Regulation defines workplace violence as “the attempted or actual exercise by a person, other than a worker, of any physical force so as to cause injury to a worker, and includes any threatening statement or behaviour which gives a worker reasonable cause to believe that he or she is at risk of injury.”

Did you know that workplace violence is one of the top ten costs when it comes to workers’ compensation claims in the retail industry in British Columbia. Surprised? So are most people.

Workplace violence includes incidents involving the use of force, as well as threatening statements and behaviours that may lead to physical altercations. Being able to deal effectively with all types of violent incidents is critical for a retail business and its employees.

Did you know that

- Violent incidents in the B.C. retail industry result in close to a million dollars in compensation payments annually?
- Retail companies lose millions of dollars each year as a result of lost merchandise, stolen money, and property damage?
- Prevention measures used to protect employees against workplace violence will also reduce stores losses?
- Employers are required by law to train employees to deal with the risk of workplace violence?
- It is illegal for employers to pass the costs of store losses on to their employees?

Violence statistics

The B.C. Crime Prevention Association surveyed 1,200 B.C. retail employees, and found that 21% of them had been subjected to violence or “aggressive acts” related to work.

From 2000 to 2004, acts of violence or force in the B.C. retail industry ranked eighth among causes of work-related injury in terms of claim costs paid. Over that period:

- the total cost of claims came to over $4.2 million
- there was an average of 109 violence-related claims each year
- the average cost per claim was the fourth highest of all injury types

Considering the nature of violence, the actual costs to business and the personal toll on front-line employees are likely much higher.

That's why a group of retail companies and organizations in B.C. has partnered with WorkSafeBC (the Workers' Compensation Board) to produce this booklet. The group meets regularly to share experiences and explore solutions to health and safety concerns in the retail industry.

This booklet presents some of the group's ideas and best practices that will help employers and employees prevent workplace violence and deal with incidents effectively if they do occur. Most of the information in this booklet will be useful to both employers and employees; however, Section 3, Preventing Violence, is aimed specifically at employers. Section 4, Possible Scenarios in Retail, includes tips for both employers and employees.

Section 2: Overview

Key risks

In many retail businesses, front-line employees are at risk from violent incidents on a daily basis. There are several reasons for this. In most operations, the public has free and easy access to the store and employees frequently need to deal with people they don't know. In addition, retail businesses typically keep cash on hand, display tempting merchandise, remain open for extended hours, and employ large numbers of young workers.

Key risks

The following are key risks for many retail businesses:

- robbery and assault
- shoplifting
- abusive and difficult customers
- unwelcome members of the public

Most employees want to do the best they can for their employers. When a potentially violent incident occurs, in the heat of the moment an employee may try to reduce the loss for the business and put themselves at risk. It is critical that employees understand that their safety is the first priority. There is no expectation for employees to be heroes. Money and merchandise can always be replaced; people can't.

Reducing the risk

Given the daily risks that many businesses face, retailers need specific plans for their stores to help protect employees and minimize the potential for violence. Retailers can reduce the potential for workplace violence through a combination of physical and procedural control measures, which include the following:

- careful store design
- use of security devices — general and personal
- employee education and training
- employee scheduling and procedures for working alone

The most effective combination of control measures (or controls, for short) will vary depending upon the type of retail store, location, and individual business practices.

Physical controls

Store design and security devices are sometimes referred to as physical controls. Physical controls may include the following:

- clear sightlines both inside and outside the store (for example, by using low shelving or mirrors, or by positioning the sales counter near a window so employees can see out and the public can see in)
- barriers such as wider counters or Plexiglas partitions (often seen in gas stations) that separate the employees from the customers
- good lighting
- security cameras

Procedural controls

Procedural controls include training, safe work procedures, and scheduling. These all have a significant impact on how vulnerable employees are to potential violence. Retail businesses should do the following:

- Provide employees with specific training on workplace violence.
- Provide specific written procedures for working alone.
- Provide specific written procedures for higher-risk situations such as opening, closing, and cashing out.
- Evaluate employee scheduling. Consider how many employees are on shift and who they are.

For more information

Employers can find more information on physical and procedural controls in Section 3 of this booklet, on pages 6–12. Employers and employees can find tips on how to deal with possible scenarios in Section 4, on pages 13–18.

Written procedures do not need to be complicated; they should focus on minimizing the risk for employees. Consider consulting your employees — front-line workers often have good ideas about potential problems and how to solve them.

Section 3: Preventing violence (for employers)

The Regulation

Sections 4.27–4.31 of the Occupational Health and Safety Regulation deal with workplace violence requirements for B.C. businesses (see Appendix G of this booklet).

The best way to deal with workplace violence is to prevent it from happening at all. As a retail employer, you can do this by developing a violence prevention plan. Your plan should identify potential risks in your business and describe the controls you will use to deal with those risks. Your controls will likely be a combination of careful store design, security devices to deter potentially violent persons, as well as training and safe work procedures for employees.

Your violence prevention plan should be specific to your worksite and type of business. Start by asking these basic questions:

- How well prepared is your business currently?
- What controls do you already have in place for violence prevention?
- What likely scenarios are you trying to protect against?

This process of gathering and evaluating information about the specific risks to your employees is a workplace violence risk assessment.

Assessing the risk

Whenever there is direct interaction between employees and the public, there is a potential for violence to occur. If experience in a specific workplace or in similar workplaces indicates that a potential for violence exists (for example, in the retail industry) the Occupational Health and Safety Regulation requires that a risk assessment be conducted.

When conducting a risk assessment, you will need to gather information about actual and potential violent incidents, and analyze your current violence prevention measures, including physical and procedural controls. Follow these basic guidelines:

- Use your knowledge and experience of your business and work location to identify potential problems. Consider all aspects of your business.
- Consider previous incidents of violence in your workplace. How many incidents have there been and what happened?
- Ask for input from employees about current problems, concerns, and possible solutions.
- Evaluate all the information and prioritize the areas that need improvement.

Your assessment should result in a list of improvements to minimize the risks to you and your employees.

Inspect your workplace

Some basic violence prevention strategies can go a long way towards making your store welcoming to customers but unattractive to thieves and robbers. When inspecting your workplace, consider the following physical controls:

- store layout
- design and position of sales counters
- types and heights of shelving
- how and where you display valuable merchandise
- use of mirrors to see partly hidden areas of the store
- use of door alarms
- use of panic alarms or personal alarms

Involve your employees

No one knows your business better than you and your employees, so make a point of asking for their input about potential risks for violence. For example, when and where do employees feel they could be unsafe? Do they feel confident that they know how to handle a violent situation? Are they aware of individuals or situations that have been problems in the past?

Ask as many of your employees as possible to complete the Safety and Security Feedback Report (Appendix C). The report is designed to get employees and supervisors thinking about specific workplace violence issues, including where they feel vulnerable and where they think improvements could be made.

Group discussions with your employees may also be effective for getting their input; and a group setting may spark a greater exchange of concerns and ideas. You can use the Safety and Security Feedback Report to help guide discussions. Record all the information discussed. The idea is to get as much information as possible about workplace violence concerns and possible controls for your business.

If your company has a safety committee, involve the committee in the process of assessing risks and developing controls.

Set priorities and develop a written plan

Prioritize the potential risks you have identified so that you know which ones to address first. Read over the returned copies of the Safety and Security Feedback Report and compare employee comments and suggestions with your completed Safety and Security Checklist. Brainstorm with your employees, or a representative team, about how you can deal with each potential risk. Prepare a written plan, including a timeline for implementing controls.

“Hardening the target”

Evaluate the use of violence prevention controls in your business — inspect your workplace using the Safety and Security Checklist in Appendix E. Contact your local community police officer for advice on robbery and theft prevention.

Employee input

Employees should complete the Safety and Security Feedback Report on pages 25–26 and give it to their employers or supervisors — they need to know what employees think about safety and security.

Share the written plan with your employees

If you want employees to take violence prevention seriously, you need to show them that you are serious too. A simple one-page summary report explaining your violence prevention plan and timeline can help achieve this. The Safety and Security Checklist is organized into categories such as “Visibility and lighting” and “Handling money and deposits.” Consider using these categories to help organize your report.

Post the report in the staff room, where employees can read it. Hold a staff meeting to go over the plan and to discuss other possible strategies.

Implement the plan

Violence prevention can easily pay for itself. It probably won't cost much, if anything, to implement most of the solutions in your plan. In fact, many of the changes that you make to improve safety will also make your business more attractive to customers and improve sales and employee morale. Also, many of the controls that help prevent violence will also help prevent robbery and theft.

Physical controls (store design and security devices)

Consider including the following store design features and security devices in your violence prevention plan:

- Barriers such as Plexiglas (as in gas stations) and wide counters help keep employees out of reach from customers.
- Low shelves ensure a good view within the store, making it more difficult for thieves to hide.
- A safe with a time lock is a good place to store cash and other valuables.
- Product placement can discourage shoplifting. Place expensive items behind the counter or in locked display.
- The cash register layout should be near a window with clear views outside so the clerk is easily visible to the public (no posters on the window). The employee should be on a raised floor to allow clear views of the entire store, and should have more than one exit to avoid being blocked in easily.

A safe with a time lock is useful for storing cash and other valuables.

- A secure refuge area such as a lockable office with a fish-eye lens in the door and a phone will allow employees to safely monitor the store.
- Mirrors and clear sight lines allow employees to see who is in the aisles or secluded parts of the store.
- Visible security cameras deter individuals and record all activities in the store.
- Communication devices for employees to summon help in an emergency include panic buttons, personal alarms carried by employees at high risk, and cell phones.
- Door alarms alert employees when someone has entered the store.
- Good lighting is useful both inside and outside the store.
- Keeping landscaping low ensures good visibility, especially near entrances and exits, and beside walkways to parking areas.
- Visible security workers can be hired in cooperation with neighbouring businesses.
- Signage advertising controls such as “Cash in time-lock safe” and “Security cameras in use” deter would-be thieves.

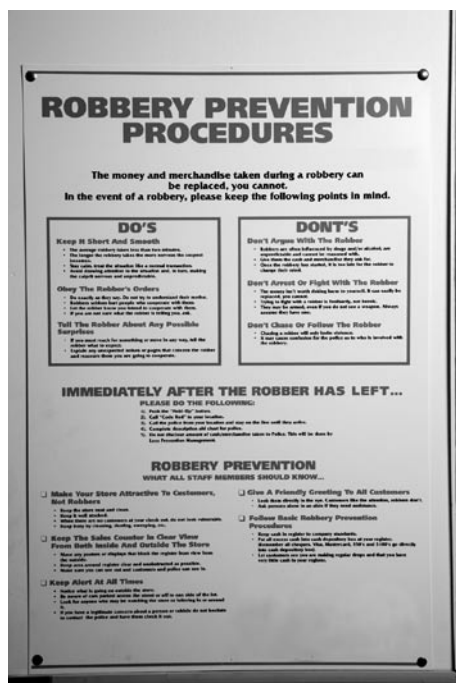

Employees can use a panic button behind the counter to summon help in an emergency.

An overhead mirror can let employees see all the aisles in the store.

An overhead security camera records what's going on in the store and helps deter shoplifters and robbers.

Written safe work procedures tell employees what to do when an incident such as a robbery occurs.

Procedural controls (training and safe work procedures)

Employers are responsible for providing a safe and healthy workplace and ensuring that employees are adequately trained before they start a job. All employees need hands-on training in the tasks they will perform and ongoing supervision to ensure that the violence prevention program is successful.

Certain activities (for example, opening and closing the store, handling money, and working alone) carry a greater risk of violence than other activities, and employees may need to follow a specific safe work procedure to eliminate or reduce the risk. Written safe work procedures specific to your store will help with employee training.

Employees require specific training in recognizing and handling potentially violent incidents. This includes information on customer behaviours to watch out for and simple actions that may prevent a situation from escalating. For instance, robbers do not want to be identified, so encouraging employees to make eye contact and greet everyone who enters the store may decrease the likelihood of robbers following through with their plans.

The following sections describe common retail scenarios, and include tips and guidelines that you can use to develop written safe work procedures.

Opening and closing the store

Retail employees are most likely to experience violent incidents at opening and closing times. Although employees may be in a hurry to get started or wrap up the workday, they should be especially vigilant and follow opening and closing procedures. If an employee doesn't know the procedures, he or she should ask the supervisor or employer for training. Employees should also know where the written procedures are so they can refer to them. Encourage employees to offer advice on improving the procedures.

It also helps for employees to work in pairs at opening and closing, especially when doing the rounds at the end of a shift. Cash handling may be part of the opening and closing routines. Employees should ensure that there are no customers in the store if this is the case, and that all entrances and exits are secure and locked.

Handling money

All retail businesses should have safe work procedures for handling money in the store or when making bank deposits. Ensure that employees follow these guidelines when handling cash in the store:

- Make sure cash handling areas are located away from entrances and exits.
- Make sure sales counters are located so they are clearly visible from inside and outside the store.
- Keep as little cash in the cash register as possible.
- Place large bills in a drop box, safe, or strongroom that is out of sight.
- Fit counter safes with time-delay locks.

Ensure that employees follow these guidelines when making bank deposits:

- Avoid making bank deposits at night.
- Vary the time and route for making deposits.
- Don't carry money in bags that make it obvious you're carrying cash or that are marked with the company logo.
- Make deposits with a co-worker, if possible. The co-worker should face away from the depository to keep an eye on other people in the area.

Employees can place large bills in a drop box to avoid keeping large sums of money in the cash register.

Working alone

Working alone presents additional risks. It also presents legal requirements, including the need for a specific written work procedure that must be developed in consultation with your employees. The written work procedure should include the following:

- specific time intervals during the shift (depending on the risk) when someone will check the employee's well-being
- a specific check at the end of the shift
- the actions that will be taken if the employee cannot be contacted or does not phone in at the appropriate time

There are many ways to set up a check system for employees who work alone. For example, 24-hour phone service providers are available for checks. The service provider will expect calls from your employees during their shifts. If an employee does not call, and does not answer a direct call, the service provider will respond immediately. Other systems involve remotely monitored security timers that employees must activate every few hours. If there is no activation, the security company will initiate a call, drive-by, or other response.

The Regulation

Sections 4.21–4.23 of the Occupational Health and Safety Regulation deal with working alone or in isolation (see Appendix H).

All employees who work alone need specific training in procedures for working alone and any check systems that are in place. Procedures must be reviewed annually or whenever there is a change in your business arrangements or practices that increases the risk or affects the current procedure.

If working alone is part of your business, your employees should follow these guidelines:

- Keep busy with tasks away from the sales counter when there are no customers in the store.
- Offer a friendly greeting to people who enter the store. Make direct and friendly eye contact but don't stare and be confrontational. Prolonged eye contact, especially if there is a group, may be seen as a challenge.
- Keep an eye on anyone who is loitering. Ask if they need assistance.
- Ensure that emergency phone numbers are handy — next to or on the phone.
- Don't leave back doors open and unattended.
- Keep the store neat and clean.
- Don't empty garbage at night. Garbage bins are often located in secluded areas.
- Stay alert and call the police if you see any suspicious activity or people around the store.

Networking

Networking with other businesses in your immediate area will help you combine your knowledge and resources, and share information on best practices. Networking provides a means of support and helps improve the immediate neighbourhood, making it safer for everyone. You and your neighbours may wish to share costs for initiatives such as:

- enhanced outdoor lighting
- motion detectors
- visible security staff
- violence prevention training

Neighbouring businesses can use informal or advertised watch systems to keep an eye on each other during the business day. Contact your community business association and start a discussion about violence prevention. You can also contact your community police office for ideas on how to improve your immediate business area and build a safer working community.

Section 4: Possible scenarios in retail (tips for employers and employees)

If you are working in a retail business, either as an employer or an employee, you may find yourself face to face with violence (for example, during a robbery), or in a situation that could become violent (for example, when dealing with a difficult or abusive customer). This section provides tips that will help front-line workers protect themselves and prevent potentially violent situations from escalating. Employers can also use these guidelines to develop safe work procedures.

Shoplifting (theft)

Shoplifting is the theft of goods that are on display in a store. It is easier, and safer, to prevent shoplifting than it is to deal with a shoplifter.

Watch out for people who...

- seem nervous or avoid eye contact
- wander around the store without buying anything
- leave the store and come back soon after
- stay in a part of the store where it is difficult to see them
- keep looking around or watching you

To discourage potential shoplifters...

- Greet and acknowledge anyone who enters the store.
- Be friendly and polite to all customers. Ask whether they need help.
- If someone looks suspicious, make friendly eye contact with him or her.
- Keep the store clean and orderly.
- Know where shoplifting is most likely to occur.
- Make your store a less desirable target. Review the ideas in Section 3.

If you suspect that someone is shoplifting...

- Play it safe! Don't be a hero; your life is more important than money or merchandise.
- Don't chase the suspect. This can quickly lead to violence. In fact, some employers have a policy of disciplining or even dismissing employees who chase a suspected thief.

What are theft and robbery?

Theft refers to someone stealing something in secret. Robbery usually refers to someone stealing something using force or the threat of violence.

- Don't accuse the person of stealing.
- Don't try to physically stop the suspect.
- Don't lock the door to keep the suspect from leaving. A person who feels trapped is more likely to panic and become violent.
- Stay at least an arm's length away from the suspect.
- Give the suspect a chance to pay or put back the item. Be sure you know what was taken and where the suspect hid it, and then politely ask, "Are you ready to pay?" or "Would you like a bag for [the item]?"
- If you feel frightened or uneasy, don't continue to confront the suspect. Get help when it's safe to do so. Alert your supervisor or any other employees who can help you.
- Call the police if you sense a threat of violence or if highly valuable items are being stolen.

After the shoplifter has left...

Fill out the Violent Incident Report (Appendix D) and give it to your supervisor or employer. This will also provide valuable information for the police. Record the date and time of the incident, and write down as much information about the shoplifter as possible, including:

- height and weight
- hair style and colour
- skin colour
- other notable features, such as scars or tattoos
- mannerisms
- clothing and footwear
- vehicle make, colour, year, and licence plate number, as well as direction of travel

Make a point of trying to describe the suspect's footwear. Many thieves and robbers will change their clothing afterwards, but not their shoes.

Robbery

Robberies typically present the greatest risk of violence to retail workers and customers. Making your store a more difficult target (see Section 3) will help protect you and your co-workers from possible violent situations and provide a safer environment for your customers.

To prevent robbery...

- Dress neatly and keep the store neat and clean. A tidy, orderly store is inviting to customers but not to robbers.
- Keep the store well lit. Report any burned-out bulbs to your manager or employer.
- Be friendly. Make eye contact and offer customers a friendly greeting as they enter the store.

- Stay alert. Watch for people showing the same behaviours as potential shoplifters (see page 13).
- If someone suspicious is standing in line, ask the customer ahead of the suspicious person, “Are you together?” The customer will usually turn around and look at the other person.
- If you see something suspicious, call the police. Never try to handle it yourself.
- Encourage the police to stop by periodically.
- Handle cash carefully and keep the amount of cash in registers to a minimum. If a customer tries to pay with a large bill, politely ask for a smaller one. Explain that you keep very little cash on hand.

If someone tries to rob your store...

- Play it safe! Don't be a hero. Cooperate; give up the money and don't resist.
- Even if you cannot see a weapon, assume that there is one.
- Stay calm and cautiously observe as much as possible about the robber. Don't stare as this may aggravate the robber.
- Don't lock the door to keep the robber from leaving. A person who feels trapped is more likely to panic and become violent.
- If you do not understand what the robber is telling you to do, ask for clarification.
- Avoid surprises. Keep your hands in sight and don't make any sudden moves.
- Inform the robber if you have to reach for something, if there is another employee in the store (for example, in the back room or cooler), or if something will make an unexpected noise.
- Keep it brief. The longer a robbery takes, the more nervous the robber becomes.
- Keep it smooth. Handle the entire situation as if it were a normal transaction.
- Activate the alarm only after the robber has left.

Crime prevention works

Criminals are always looking for ways to beat crime prevention systems, but there's only so far that they're willing to go. You can lower your chances of being robbed or being involved in a violent incident by remembering one simple rule: the greater the risk of getting caught, the lower the likelihood that someone will commit the offence.

After the robber has left...

- Don't chase or follow the robber.
- Lock the store.
- Call the police and follow their instructions; then call your supervisor or employer to report the robbery.
- Ask any witnesses to stay until the police arrive. Try to make them as comfortable as possible while they wait.
- Protect the crime scene. Do not allow anyone to touch anything that might be considered evidence, and do not resume business until the police are finished.
- Do not discuss details of the robbery with anyone until after the police have taken statements from everyone.

- Use the Violent Incident Report (Appendix D) to record information and share it with the police; then give it to your supervisor or employer. Record the time and date of the incident, and write down as much information about the robber as possible, including:
 - ~ height and weight
 - ~ hair style and colour
 - ~ skin colour
 - ~ other notable features, such as scars or tattoos
 - ~ mannerisms
 - ~ clothing and footwear
 - ~ vehicle make, colour, year, and licence plate number, as well as direction of travel

Difficult or irate customers

In a retail business, you will eventually have to deal with difficult or irate customers. Such customers may become aggressive, leaving you feeling threatened and vulnerable.

Under the Trespass Act, you can simply ask a difficult customer to leave the premises. If the customer refuses, you can call 9-1-1 and say, “I have a hostile customer who refuses to leave.” However, don’t ask someone to leave if you feel that it might make him or her more aggressive.

Defusing a situation

- Ask questions to help you understand what the customer’s concerns are.
- If you are an employee and you are unable to address the customer’s complaint adequately, encourage the customer to speak with your manager or someone else who has authority to make decisions or changes.
- If a customer is angry about being asked for ID for cigarettes, point to the ID-requirement posters and stickers, and explain that you are only obeying the law.
- Focus on being respectful and courteous. Try to remain calm, and try to calm the customer.
- Avoid focusing on who is right or wrong. Focus instead on determining what will satisfy the customer and on finding ways to help the customer save face.
- Stick to facts, not opinions or judgments. Ignore insults. Keep bringing the discussion back to the real issue.
- Listen carefully, and try to put yourself in the customer’s shoes.
- If the customer is disruptive and noisy, and if it is safe to do so, move to a quieter location, possibly with the help of a co-worker.
- If you cannot calm the customer, ask for help.

Know when to walk away

If the customer becomes agitated and it seems likely that the situation will escalate:

- Don’t offer solutions and don’t argue.
- Get help immediately.
- Ask a supervisor for assistance or give the customer the name and phone number of someone to contact.

Abusive customers

Abusive conduct does not necessarily include physical violence, but physical violence often starts with abusive conduct. Abusive conduct includes:

- demeaning, degrading, intimidating, offensive, or otherwise abusive expressions
- unwelcome sexual attention
- bullying
- stalking

No form of abuse is acceptable. If you are faced with abusive conduct, follow these guidelines:

- Tell the customer to stop. Do this right away, before the unwanted behaviour becomes a pattern.
- Tell the customer why the behaviour is unacceptable. If the customer persists, ask him or her to leave.
- Report the incident to your employer or the person who normally deals with this type of complaint.
- If you believe you are being followed or stalked, call the police.
- If the threat or abuse is from someone directly connected to your personal life, do not be afraid to call the police, especially if the situation is escalating.

Unwelcome members of the public

Retail workers face many difficult situations, especially if the store is open for longer hours. Employers should plan for and train their employees on how to handle situations such as:

- people loitering outside the store or gathering inside the store
- gangs or groups using the storefront as a meeting place
- homeless people at the store entrance asking for spare change or using the doorway as a shelter for the night
- drug addicts using the storefront area or washrooms

In situations such as these, well-meaning employees may talk to the people involved to try and solve the problem. Doing so, however, may actually increase the risk of a violent incident. Employers and managers should make it clear to employees that they must not attempt to deal with these situations alone. Instead, employees should report their concerns to a supervisor or ask the police to come to the store.

Dealing with trespassers

- If you think someone might be hiding in a back room or washroom, don't call out. Go to a safe place and phone for help.
- If you find someone in an unauthorized area, don't block the exit. A person who feels trapped is more likely to panic and become violent.
- If you are responding to a break-in, do not enter the building unless you know it is safe. Call the police and wait for them to arrive first.
- Remember that you have the legal right to ask people to leave the premises.

Trust your instincts.

If something
doesn't feel right,
it probably isn't.

Employers and managers should also consider taking steps to lessen the likelihood of these situations:

- Hire a private security firm. Some business associations have programs to help stores with their security needs. Neighbouring businesses can work together to pay for security guards or patrol cars.
- Post signs prohibiting loitering and stating that washrooms will be closed during the night shift.
- Limit the number of people in the store.
- Improve lighting in and around the store.
- Consider removing amenities that could encourage groups to gather, such as automatic teller machines (ATMs) and pay phones.

Suspicious persons

Sometimes when somebody is in the store, it just doesn't feel right. You may notice something odd about a person's appearance, body language, behaviour, or mannerisms, almost subconsciously, which may make you feel concerned. This person could be in the store to shoplift, rob the store, or worse.

When a suspicious person is in the store, assess the situation carefully. Follow these guidelines:

- Listen to your instincts. Remember that your safety is more important than the goods in the store.
- Consider contacting the police or your security service. Describe the situation, the suspicious person, and how long they have been in the store.
- If someone has been in the store for a long time and they seem to be looking for something, ask loudly whether they need help. Keep your distance — stay at least an arm's length away.
- Consider whether you need to move to the store's secure area, where you can safely monitor the store (for example, to a lockable office with a fish-eye lens installed in the door and a phone).
- When the suspicious person has left, write a description in the log so that other employees can watch out for this person. This will also help you recognize the person if he or she returns.

Employers can make their stores less of a target by following these guidelines:

- Ensure that the store has good lighting and good visibility.
- Keep valuable goods behind the counter or in locked displays.
- Post signs indicating that there is little or no cash in the store.
- Install clearly visible cameras.
- Make eye contact with and greet everyone who enters the store.

For more ideas on making your store less of a target, see Section 3.

Section 5: What to do after a violent incident

Even after an employer takes steps to prevent violence in a retail business, violent incidents may still occur. If this happens, it's important to act quickly to minimize the effects on employees. Employers should provide support to victims, report and investigate the incident, and revise the violence prevention plan to prevent a similar incident in the future.

Provide first aid and other medical attention if necessary

If an employee is seriously hurt during an incident, the employer must do the following:

- Provide first aid.
- Arrange for transport to a medical facility.
- Notify WorkSafeBC.

If it is a less serious injury, provide appropriate first aid and refer to a doctor if necessary. If there has been possible contact with blood or other body fluids, make sure the employee gets professional medical assistance as soon as possible.

Make sure employees know where first aid supplies are kept and how to get help if they are hurt but don't need an ambulance.

Take employees seriously

Never dismiss or downplay complaints or reports of violence. Employees should never be told or feel that they have to deal with the problem by themselves.

All businesses must have an adequate first aid kit available. For more information on first aid requirements, use the online First Aid Assessment Tool at www2.worksafebc.com/calculator/firstaid/.

Arrange a critical incident intervention if necessary

WorkSafeBC can coordinate critical incident interventions to help people deal with traumatic events at work. This help may also be available through your local police department. Two basic types of interventions are defusing sessions and debriefing sessions.

Calling for a critical incident intervention

If you have any questions or wish to arrange an intervention, contact the Critical Response Liaison at 604 233-4052 in the Lower Mainland or 1 888 621-7233, local 4052, toll-free in B.C.

For urgent or after-hours calls, call the emergency pager at 1 888 922-3700 toll-free in B.C.

A defusing session is a short (30–45 minutes), confidential, non-judgmental session in which employees affected by the incident meet with a trained leader (called a defuser). Defusing sessions are usually held within 6 to 8 hours of the incident.

A debriefing session is a confidential, non-judgmental discussion about the continuing effects of the incident. It is intended to address the well-being of employees and alleviate distress. It is usually held within 1 to 3 days of the incident. A trained professional should lead the session.

The Critical Response Liaison at WorkSafeBC can help determine whether an employee needs trauma counselling. If necessary, offer the employee trauma counselling through an established Employee Assistance Program, a doctor's referral, or the Critical Response Liaison. Encourage employees to talk about their responses to and feelings about the incident, and let them know that you are available to listen. If employees internalize, bury, or “wall off” their reactions to the event, it can be extremely harmful in the long run.

Watch for signs and symptoms

A traumatic incident such as armed robbery can be emotionally and psychologically damaging. Employees who have gone through a traumatic incident may:

- feel anxious, moody, or irritable
- feel numb or dazed
- have trouble concentrating or making decisions
- be afraid to go near the scene of the incident
- not want to be alone
- not want to be with other people
- have flashbacks, nightmares, or disturbing memories of the incident
- vomit more than a couple of hours after the incident
- experience uncontrolled, spontaneous crying
- experience changes in appetite and sleeping patterns

Employers should be sensitive to these warning signs and symptoms. Violent incidents can seriously affect the well-being of employees, and may put people at a greater risk of workplace accidents. You may notice an increase in absenteeism. Timely, positive follow-up shows employees that they are supported in the workplace and that steps are being taken to protect them. If an employee shows signs or symptoms after being involved in a violent incident, or the signs or symptoms get worse, further professional help may be necessary.

Report and investigate the incident

Report incidents such as assaults or robberies to the police right away. You should also report such incidents to WorkSafeBC if they involve employees and treatment is needed. You also need to complete Form 52E40 — Incident Investigation Report (see Appendix F) to help prevent the incident from happening again.

Goals of investigation

Incident investigations help determine the causes of an incident so you can take steps to ensure that it does not happen again. As much as possible, an investigation must:

- determine the causes of the incident
- identify any conditions, acts, or procedures that contributed to the incident
- find ways to prevent similar incidents

The incident investigation should answer the following questions:

- Who was involved?
- Where and when did the incident happen?
- What happened? Include as much detail as possible.
- Why did the incident happen?
- How will the incident be dealt with?

Interview witnesses and people involved in the incident even if they weren't present when it happened. For example, it may be appropriate to interview a supervisor who gave instructions at the start of a shift or a trainer who previously instructed the employees involved.

Incident investigation documents

Keep copies of all documents and reports related to the incident. You can use this information to help improve your violence prevention strategy. It will also be useful if you and your employees need to file a claim. It is a good idea for all the employees involved in the incident to document it from their perspectives. Use the Violent Incident Report in Appendix D to collect information from employees.

Follow these guidelines to help prevent similar types of incidents from recurring:

- Inform employees who were not involved in the incident and welcome their suggestions for preventing a recurrence.
- Determine if there is anything you can do to protect your employees and business from this kind of incident. For example, can you improve lighting, security, or the layout of the store?
- Update your plan for preventing and dealing with workplace violence, and implement any necessary changes. For example, if employees need special training to deal with potentially threatening situations, include it in your plan.
- Assign someone to make the necessary changes, and ensure that the changes are made.

Appendix A: Some do's and don'ts for preventing retail violence

Do

- Be polite and friendly to all customers.
- Make eye contact and greet customers as they enter the store.
- Look for signs that customers are upset or under the influence of alcohol or drugs.
- Learn to recognize customers who are likely to cause trouble.
- Stay calm. Listen to customers and respond calmly.
- Try to steer customer anger away from you. For example, if a customer is angry because you won't sell him or her cigarettes, explain that you are just following the law.
- Encourage customers who are angry or upset to talk to the manager. If the manager is not available, give the customer a phone number to call.
- Make sure important signs stay posted. For example, the front door might have signs that say: "Store has limited cash after dark" and "Time-lock safe — Clerk cannot open."
- Keep emergency numbers on hand. Stick them on each phone.

Don't

- Trade insults with customers or react to their anger.
- Take customer complaints personally.
- Talk down to customers.
- Try to physically stop or hold someone.
- Put up displays, signs, or posters that block the view of the cash register or exit doors from inside or outside the store. (Robbers hate to perform for an audience.)

Remember that you can't control other people. The best thing you can do is control your own feelings, words, and actions.

Appendix B: Travelling to and from work

Safety doesn't begin and end with your work shift. Include safety and prevention in everything you do, including travel to and from work. Just having a confident manner affects how you appear to potential assailants and can help prevent an incident.

If you are driving

- Lock your doors and roll up your windows before entering the parking lot.
- Scan the area for suspicious persons. Have a plan ready in case you are uncomfortable with the situation.
- Park in well-lit areas. Avoid alleys, wooded areas, and tunnels.
- Avoid having to reach back into the vehicle for anything.
- Avoid walking to your vehicle alone after work, or at least have someone watch you from the window if you do.

If you are using public transit

- Plan to arrive at the bus stop just before the bus arrives.
- Avoid isolated or poorly lit bus stops.
- If you see suspicious or menacing people at your stop, get off at the next stop.
- If possible, have someone meet you when you arrive at your destination.

If you are attacked or robbed

- If someone attacks you, scream as loudly and long as possible, and run to the nearest well-lit area.
- If someone grabs your purse, deposit bag, or other property, do not resist and do not chase the robber.
- Call the police immediately, and try to remember the description and mannerisms of the attacker.
- Write down any information about the attacker as soon as possible.

Appendix G: Occupational Health and Safety

Regulation excerpt — Violence in the Workplace

4.27 Definition

In sections 4.28 to 4.31

“violence” means the attempted or actual exercise by a person, other than a worker, of any physical force so as to cause injury to a worker, and includes any threatening statement or behaviour which gives a worker reasonable cause to believe that he or she is at risk of injury.

4.28 Risk assessment

- (1) A risk assessment must be performed in any workplace in which a risk of injury to workers from violence arising out of their employment may be present.
- (2) The risk assessment must include the consideration of
 - (a) previous experience in that workplace,
 - (b) occupational experience in similar workplaces, and
 - (c) the location and circumstances in which work will take place.

4.29 Procedures and policies

If a risk of injury to workers from violence is identified by an assessment performed under section 4.28 the employer must

- (a) establish procedures, policies and work environment arrangements to eliminate the risk to workers from violence, and
- (b) if elimination of the risk to workers is not possible, establish procedures, policies and work environment arrangements to minimize the risk to workers.

4.30 Instruction of workers

- (1) An employer must inform workers who may be exposed to the risk of violence of the nature and extent of the risk.
- (2) The duty to inform workers in subsection (1) includes a duty to provide information related to the risk of violence from persons who have a history of violent behaviour and whom workers are likely to encounter in the course of their work.
- (3) The employer must instruct workers who may be exposed to the risk of violence in
 - (a) the means for recognition of the potential for violence,
 - (b) the procedures, policies and work environment arrangements which have been developed to minimize or effectively control the risk to workers from violence,
 - (c) the appropriate response to incidents of violence, including how to obtain assistance, and
 - (d) procedures for reporting, investigating and documenting incidents of violence.

4.31 Advice to consult physician

(1) Repealed. [B.C. Reg. 312/2003, effective October 29, 2003.]

(2) Repealed. [B.C. Reg. 312/2003, effective October 29, 2003.]

(3) The employer must ensure that a worker reporting an injury or adverse symptom as a result of an incident of violence is advised to consult a physician of the worker's choice for treatment or referral.

Note: The requirements for risk assessment, procedures and policies, the duty to respond to incidents and to instruct workers are based on the recognition of violence in the workplace as an occupational hazard. This hazard is to be addressed by the occupational health and safety program following the same procedures required by this Occupational Health & Safety Regulation to address other workplace hazards.

Appendix H: Occupational Health and Safety

Regulation excerpt — Working Alone or in Isolation

4.21 Procedures

- (1) The employer must develop and implement a written procedure for checking the well-being of a worker assigned to work alone or in isolation under conditions which present a risk of disabling injury, if the worker might not be able to secure assistance in the event of injury or other misfortune.
- (2) The procedure for checking a worker's well-being must include the time interval between checks and the procedure to follow in case the worker cannot be contacted, including provisions for emergency rescue.
- (3) A person must be designated to establish contact with the worker at predetermined intervals and the results must be recorded by the person.
- (4) In addition to checks at regular intervals, a check at the end of the work shift must be done.
- (5) The procedure for checking a worker's well-being, including time intervals between the checks, must be developed in consultation with the joint committee or the worker health and safety representative, as applicable.
- (6) Time intervals for checking a worker's well-being must be developed in consultation with the worker assigned to work alone or in isolation.

Note: High risk activities require shorter time intervals between checks. The preferred method for checking is visual or two-way voice contact, but where such a system is not practicable, a one-way system which allows the worker to call or signal for help and which will send a call for help if the worker does not reset the device after a predetermined interval is acceptable.

4.22 Training

A worker required to work in the circumstances described in section 4.21(1) and any person assigned to check on the worker must be trained in the written procedure for checking the worker's well-being.

4.23 Annual review

The procedure and system for checking a worker's well-being must be reviewed at least annually, or more frequently if there is a change in work arrangements which could adversely affect a worker's well-being or a report that the system is not working effectively.
